Objective -1 To understand the role of social start up in economic development

- In Indian context after the global recession hit the world first start up started to take shape. In India after great recession majority IT professionals and similar other such professionals started looking for this option.
- According to Inc Report India boasts more than 6000 startups and in last 10 years best talent has been limited to corporations and slowly the gap is getting bridged and we have examples like Milk basket, Epigamia, Storyxpress, Paytm
- There are three dominant factors that led to growth of entrepreneurship like- Information Technology, Consumerism, and Innovation. In India from historic times we are entrepreneurial in nature, Indian Traders use to travel to Egypt, Burma and Vietnam among other countries.
- The Global Entrepreneurship Monitor estimates that some 20% intend to be entrepreneurs. Since entry of IBM in India during 1950's set foundation of IT driven support followed by TCS and then names like Patni system which created difference
- In policies and growing middle class with higher incomes also led to better choice and consumerism thus giving rise to e-commerce, specialized retail ,hyper delivery network and creation of hyper delivery networks. This was witnessed with large consumer brands like Amazon and Uber and Walmart acquired Flipkart at $22billion.
- The other important aspect that led to growth was Innovation curve. There was lot of advancement in terms of B2B models and high IP driven innovation.

INTRODUCTION

Food industry is going through many innovations and restaurants are using high technology to promote their brands. One of the new trends observed is Cloud kitchen. Increasing internet penetration and supportive logistic or delivery system is helpful to customers. Till few years pizza was only food ordered online. The development in food ordering apps has increased online food ordering and home delivery. Increasing millennial population, use of smart phones, internet services and app based technology are promoting online food ordering. Increasing number of restaurants and food junctions/outlets are increasing customer base using online portals for the growth of business. According to Deloitte convenience is important for millennial order food online or dines out at least once or more than once in a month.
